After the Boston massacre, Sam Adams set up the Committee of Correspondence.

The British Gov't repealed the Tax on glass, paper, paint, and lead. This left only the tax on Tea. Most were satisfied, but not Sam Adams.

He was peeking at a meeting when news came that English ships with tea came into the harbor. He adjourned the meeting. His words were a signal: 50 men dressed as Indians made for the harbor followed by a crowd. They boarded the ships, broke open the boxes & tossed all the tea into the Boston Harbor 342 chests of tea. Boston was punished. The Harbor was cut off from rest of the world. Other colonies sent help to Mass & decided to hold a meeting in Philadelphia to decide what to do

George R.R. Hawes gave a written account of his participation in the Boston Tea Party.

Dressed himself in costume of Indian & small hatchet & also a club. Painted face & hands with coal dust. To Griffin's wharf. Many were painted & equipped as himself. Leonard Pitt was his supervisor (commander). He was appointed boatswain: Demand of the Captain the keys &

a dozen candles. He promptly delivered.
open the hatches: take out the chests of tea & throw overboard, cutting & splintering the tea chest with their small arms. In 3 hours they had broken open all the tea chests they could find. They were surrounded by British Ships, but no attempt made to resist
the effort. Then quietly went to rendezvous.
